Spiritual Message

How Can I Get in the Routine of Regular Bible Study?

by Gelna Marshall

How Long?

If you're new to Bible study, start small. The best way to avoid early burnout is to not start too strong. If you begin a new exercise regimen but start with lifting weights that are too heavy or running too far in the first week, you will likely quit within a couple of days or weeks. Start by spending ten to fifteen minutes in study and prayer. As you study regularly, your desire will deepen, and you'll find yourself adding to that time. For me, what started as ten minutes a day fifteen years ago eventually grew into an hour each day. As you feed your soul with biblical nourishment, your appetite will grow, and you'll expand your time with the Lord.

When?

The man in Psalm 1 meditated on God's word day and night. While this implies that the word was on his mind all the time, it can also help us consider different times of the day as options for study time. Some texts refer to seeking God first thing in the morning: I rise before dawn and cry for help; I hope in your words. (Ps. 119:147) And rising very early in the morning, while it was still dark, [Jesus] departed and went out to a desolate place, and there he prayed. (Mark 1:35)

The principle we can gather from texts like these is that there's no hard-and-fast rule about when we meet with the Lord. We can study and pray any time of day! The point is that we need to carve out time to study and pray.
